BREWING INDUSTRY DONATES ENTIRE ADVERTISING SPACE TO GOVERNMENT

EFFECTIVE FEB. 20.

For the next six months the Brewing Industry of Alberta has offered the entire advertising space in the newspapers of Alberta to the Dominion Government. This patriotic offer has been accepted by the Hon. J. L. Hsley in behalf of the Government and the newspaper advertising space will be devoted to the Campaign to Invest in War Savings Certificates. In his acceptance of this offer, the Minister of Finance thanked the Brewing Industry of the Province for the Government of Canada and termed it "a very generous and patriotic offer."

LINDBERGH BOOKS OFF SCHOOL LISTS

Edmonton, Feb. 15 (CP) Certain publications of which Col. Charles Lindbergh, noted U. S. airman, is author, will be withdrawn from the lists of available school books in Alberta owing to lack of demand, officials of the provincial department of education announced Friday.

School courses include certain of Col. Lindbergh's writings which are available for optional reading. One of these is a pamphlet entitled "Lindbergh's Flights" which is available for pupils in primary grades. The Lindbergh book "We" telling of flights across the Atlantic and other journeys, is available for optional reading in grades ten and eleven.

The books were withdrawn as a result of Col. Lindbergh's testimony on the lend lease bill at Washington.

RED CROSS TO HAVE BOOTH AT SPIEL

The local Red Cross is going to operate a lunch counter at the local curling Bonspiel March 3rd to the 8th from 2 to 5 p. m. and from 8 to 11 p. m. each day in aid of the Red Cross. Lunch will be Hot Dogs and Doughnuts and Coffee. Any donations of buns, doughnuts, weiners, Coffee, sugar or cream will help towards making it a success.

Mesdames Robinson, Butts, Harrington, Bangs, Alder, Pfeiffer are a Committee to arrange the lunch they would appreciate being notified if you care to help.

WONT CANCEL LINDBERGH PASS

Montreal, Feb. 10 (P) Canadian National Railways has given "careful consideration" to the idea of cancelling a lifetime pass held by Col. Charles Lindbergh, President S. J. Hungerford said in a statement here.

"Such a course of action for several reasons was decided as being undesirable," said Mr. Hungerford, adding that the pass now is in the permanent collection of the Jefferson Memorial in St. Louis, Mo.

Mr. Hungerford made this statement in a telegraphed reply to the Canadian Legion branch of New Glasgow, N. S., which had asked for cancellation of the pass. A branch resolution said it considers Lindbergh "an enemy" to our cause and of that of the motherland.

The pass was issued to Lindbergh, said Mr. Hungerford, in 1927 in connection with Canada's diamond jubilee celebrations.

ROUND ABOUT TOWN

Our young bachelor from the restaurant seems finally to have made his choice among the girls. At least, so it would seem, when he starts hugging them right out in public.

Tsk, tsk, tsk. Some more jealousy shown plainly in the curling rink. Too bad one of our young men likes fun so well.

Our newly-made twosome seems to be progressing favorably. At least they're still walking to school together. We wonder how our principal feels about all this.

The Cerebral dance proved successful for at least one young lady. She now sports a beautiful chromium watch on her left wrist. We hope the loss of his timepiece won't put the young man too far behind time.

What happened to another of our young ladies last Friday evening? Her very brief appearance on the dance floor puzzled us. We do hope she wasn't taken ill. Perhaps the new boy friend could help us solve the mystery.

Just a word of advice to two of Chinook's young "brats" about town. Better mind your P's and Q's, Miss D., and you too, Miss H. Climbing over high board fences to peep in at the windows of private homes is quite a farce down from your usual practise of trying to act grown-up by primping all through recess in front of the mirror in the school kitchen. Don't you think? Why not try acting your age? Just for a change, you know.

Italy will send 40,000 more workers for employment in German industry making a total of about 110,000.

Netherlanders the world over are preparing to pay a "voluntary" income tax to help arm the Dutch forces.

The Royal Canadian Air Force made known that Americans enlisting in the air force no longer get a written agreement exempting them from overseas service.

Great lakes steamship authorities said they expect a shortage of experienced seamen on the lakes this year due to the number of sailors who have joined the armed services.

Sugar beet acreage will be reduced from 23,964 in southern Alberta in 1941 because of large sugar stocks in western Canada, it was announced.

A plane recently completed to be used in anti-aircraft practice, is radio-controlled, powered with a 80-horsepower engine and is capable of a top speed of 150 miles an hour.

Construction in Halifax harbor of a floating drydock big enough to accommodate the largest merchant and fighting ships afloat was possible in the near future, the Halifax Chronicle said.

Postmaster General Mulock said mail moving through the base post office and addressed to Canadian soldiers abroad in 1940 totalled approximately 5,600,000 letters, 596,000 pounds of newspaper and 3,260,000 pounds of parcels.

The labor department reported a total of 10 strikes and lockouts during January involved 1,453 workers and caused a time loss of 3,238 man working days. In the preceding month there were nine such disputes involving 903 workers and time loss of 3,360 days.

Has Never Been Popular

Manx Cat Not Greatly Admired Outside Isle Of Man

A contributor in the New York Sun tells us that perhaps the first authentic Manx cats in England, at least the first to be regularly bred there, were those of Miss Helen Hill Shaw. Visiting in the Isle of Man as a young girl some 50 or 60 years ago, she fell in love with the tailless cats and took several with her to Surrey. Miss Shaw formed the British Manx Cat Society, and wrote charming books about her pets.

But the cat, quaint and intelligent and affectionate as it is, never has been really popular. The late C. A. House, veteran breeder and judge, said in his "Our Cats and All About Them," published in London 40 years ago, "The Manx fancy has fits and starts. . . . At the moment this breed is not extravagantly popular."

Manx admirers insist that lack of a tail makes a cat trim and ship-shape, that "tail-wavers" look ungainly in comparison. But the human race is conservative, and always has taken its cats with tails.

Ready For Accounting

Opponents Of Hitler Prepared To Give Him His Punishment

In eight years Hitler has made Germany a by-word of cruelty, degradation and dishonor amongst all civilized people. He has incurred the distrust of those other dictators whom he once imitated but now has outgrown in wickedness.

In those eight years he forced nations which were striving to raise the living conditions of their people to a higher level to join in the bankrupting armament race. And finally he has trampled freedom out of Germany's innocent little neighbors. He has raised across Europe, from Scandinavia to the Rock of Gibraltar, one long wail of anguish. He has murdered the infant in its pram in Bordeaux and caused bombs to fall on Berlin and half a hundred German cities.

Not so many years ago the world listened and shivered when Hitler spoke. It does not any longer. His opponents are ready for the accounting.—Toronto Telegram.

Saskatchewan Coal

Coal production in Saskatchewan for the third quarter of 1940 totalled 132,532 tons. Practically all the coal mined in Saskatchewan is in the Estevan district, and is of a lignite variety.

Contrary to many popular story writers, bear tracks do not resemble those of humans.

Every particle of the earth, from chalk to diamonds, once was only gas, according to scientists. 2399

Another Clever Dog

Knows Difference In Sound Between Bombs And AA Guns

A dog that can "hear a bomb leave" when an enemy plane is flying overhead is boasted by an English friend of a Galt, Ont., resident, in a letter telling of her air raid experiences. The dog, she says, pays no attention to AA fire or roaring planes, but all of a sudden he "gets up and scoots under a large heavy table in the hall. I go after him. He is never wrong. When the bomb lands we calmly emerge, pick up the knitting by the fire and carry on till the next time."

Colonel Lindbergh may feel that British cannot win the war, but then a famous natural scientist, Simon Newcomb "proved" that the Wright brothers could not possibly fly.

Ideas Have Been Developed

Professor Demonstrates Methods Of Dissipating Fog Over Airports

Two artificial means of dissipating fog above airports have been developed by Dr. Sverre Pettersen, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. Pettersen said a system whereby the airport was heated has been successful in clearing fog from the runways by evaporation.

The second experiment was to spray a solution of sulphur chloride into the fog above the airport. An area 150 feet wide, 30 feet in height and 1,500 feet long, was cleared by this method, he said.

Some people are comparing Hitler with Napoleon—but there is one difference. Napoleon fought in the front line with his troops.

New Poster For Empire

Shows Winston Churchill With Caption "Let Us Go Forward"

Thousands of posters with a larger-than life size portrait of Prime Minister Churchill are being made for distribution throughout the Empire.

Mr. Churchill, wearing a black hat and smiling grimly, is shown against a background of the English countryside with a column of tanks moving across it and a squadron of fighting planes overhead. Posters carry the phrase, "Let Us Go Forward" translated into every language spoken in the Empire.

Real Strength Of Britain

Is To Be Found In Homes Of The Common People

It is the Man in the Street who is fighting Britain's war. A distinguished American visitor, with all government doors opened to him by magic, can do his fact-finding at Whitehall and Downing Street and in the grim defences of "Hell's Corner" on the Channel coast. But it is behind humbler doors that the real strength of Britain lies. The measure of English courage must be taken in the bomb's shelters, and the corner stores, and among the free-speaking patrons of the pubs.—New York Times.

It now turns out that Italian sea power has presented a problem to the British. The problem at Tobruk is clearing away the hulks of seventeen sunken Italian ships from the harbors.

New Air Base

Newfoundland Base Will Not Be Finished For A Year

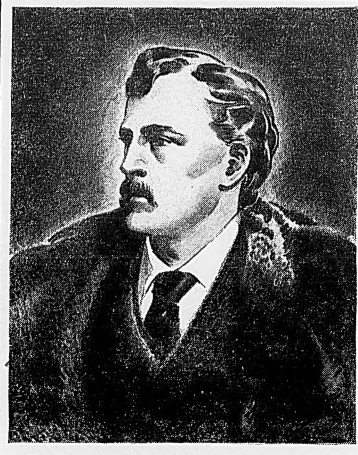

Col. Frank Knox, Secretary of the United States Navy, told a press conference that construction on the navy's new base at Argentia Bay, Newfoundland, probably will not be finished for a year, but that the base can be used in the meantime. Col. Knox said naval planes already have operated from the bay, although none is based there now. The construction contract of $4,860,000 is held by a Boston firm.

THE MARQUIS OF LORNE, K.T., G.C.M.G.
GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF CANADA, 1878-1883

60 YEARS AGO
A Charter was signed

On February 15, 1881, the Marquis of Lorne, then Governor-General of Canada, signed the charter of the Canadian Pacific Railway. That signature consummated the vision of great Canadian statesmen—Sir John A. Macdonald, D'Arcy McGee, Sir Georges-Etienne Cartier, and Sir Charles Tupper—that the new Dominion of Canada should be linked from Atlantic to Pacific by a trans-continental railway—and implemented the pledge under which British Columbia entered Confederation.

So began a new era in Canadian unity . . . and Empire solidarity . . . for the Railway expanded into a system spanning two oceans and linking three continents. Today—as in 1914-18—a proud responsibility rests on our transportation and communication systems—railway, steamships, freight, express, telegraphs and engineering shops. Canadian Pacific officers and employees everywhere are co-operating—each in his own field—towards the common goal . . . VICTORY. When that goal is reached—and it will be reached—this will be due, in no small measure, to Canada's contribution, and to the vision and foresight of the men who, sixty years ago, planned the construction of the first Canadian trans-continental railway.

CHAPTER VII.

The Monday morning street car seemed a little less crowded than usual. Nancy Thorne found a seat in the corner and huddled there, staring out the window with unseeing eyes.

Through the long afternoon and night one thought had run through her mind like the chorus of a song. She was alone now. There was no one she could trust. It had seemed to her as though impenetrable walls had sprung up between her and the people she loved most.

She held back the threatened tears with a heroic effort. No use in making a spectacle of herself on the street car. Holding her chin high she took out her compact and powdered her nose and brushed back her coppery hair, with a convincing air of calm.

The situation had to be faced, that was all. Tom was in this terrible thing, and so was Pat. No matter what her own feelings might be, she couldn't give them away. She'd have to manage some excuse to Hugo Blake for not doing his work. Maybe she could leave the Bristow plant and go away. A dozen projects, all impractical, ran through her mind.

A passenger getting off the street car left his folded newspaper in the seat beside Nancy, and she picked it up and glanced at it aimlessly.

"STUDENT AND INSTRUCTOR ESCAPE DEATH IN CRASH"

The black headline was like a blow. Quickly she glanced through the rest of the story. There were few details given, only that no cause had been assigned to the accident, and that by some miracle the instructor and student pilot had escaped with minor injuries.

Tom had said—"a lot of unexplained accidents..."

Pat had said—"There's nothing I wouldn't do for money..."

Tom had said—"You're in this up to your neck..."

She closed her eyes and saw that tiny training ship as she had seen it yesterday, circling so gracefully against the sky. She remembered groups of student pilots as she had seen them, their bronzed smiling faces looking into the sun.

By the time the street car came to a clanging stop before the John Bristow Die-Casting Company, she knew she must keep to her resolve, regardless of what it might do to Pat or to Tom Cantwell.

She climbed wearily up the concrete and iron stairs, punched her card on the time clock and placed it in the rack, and went to her desk.

It was a little before 8, and the other office girls were congregated in small groups, laughing and chatting of the week ends they had spent. One or two of them glanced at Nancy, nodded briefly, looked away again. Annie Burke, with her bright, gamine face, did come up for a cheery greeting, but then the 8 o'clock bell rang and work began.

"Good morning, Miss Ellis."

She looked up. John Bristow, his round, ruddy face beaming, was looking down at her. It seemed odd, having him call her by her assumed name.

"Oh—good morning, Mr. Bristow."

"I haven't seen you since you started work here. How do you like it?"

She smiled at him. "I like it fine."

"That's good. I hope you get along splendidly."

He nodded to her, spoke to several of the other girls in the same friendly fashion, and went in into Grimshaw's office. For just an instant Nancy felt faintly hurt at his cool impersonality. In the next instant she realized that he was being tactful and in her heart she thanked him for it. She was unprepared enough now with the other girls without the added disadvantage of being a favorite of the boss.

The office fairly hummed with work, with the added impetus of the big boss himself being on the premises. Nancy's fingers fairly flew over the keyboard as she tried to keep up with the work Miss Fletcher piled on her desk, realizing as she did so that the added work was being given her in an attempt to make it appear she was getting behind.

"File those right away, Miss Ellis."

A frantic moment at the filing cabinets.

"Get those copied in a hurry—they want them downstairs."

A rush back to the typewriter.

"Take those reports to Mr. Grimshaw as soon as you have them done. He wants them right away."

She finished the last one in a breathless rush, gathered them together and knocked at the door of Mr. Grimshaw's office. Through the glass she saw him nod to her to come in, and opened the door.

At least the attacks on our trucks have stopped," John Bristow was saying as she entered. "That takes a load off my mind."

"Just put those on the desk, Miss Ellis," the office manager said crisply. He went on talking to John Bristow. "There probably won't be any more attempts. This place is entirely too well protected."

Nancy stole a look at him as she laid the reports in a wire basket before him. He seemed to look ill, very ill. Frightened, too.

"That's what I think," Bristow said. "Now about this other business..."

That was all she heard before the door closed behind her.

"These orders have to be copied quickly, Miss Ellis. All of them have to be out before noon." It was Madge Fletcher again.

Nancy nodded and started back to work, her mind filled with what she had overheard. The attacks on the trucks had ceased, John Bristow said. He believed it was because the protection was so great.

Hugo Blake had said something about new methods—nothing as crude as overturning a truck filled with valuable dies and patterns. That was why the attacks on the trucks had ceased. There was some new, more frightful way. She wished with all her heart that she could ward the friendly, white-haired man who believed his plant was safe.

"Finished with those, Miss Ellis?" She shook her head. "Almost. I'll be done in a few minutes."

"Well, finish them before you go to lunch, and leave them on my desk."

Five minutes after 12. Ten minutes, 15 minutes, 20 minutes and finally the last one was done. She made a quick check-up for possible errors, found none, and laid the orders in a neat pile on Madge Fletcher's desk. Her head was fairly whirling, her fingers still tingled.

Mr. Grimshaw, she noticed, had not left his office. She could see him through the glass door, still sitting at his desk, his head in his hands. She wondered if she ought to go in and ask if she might do anything for him. No, perhaps it would be better to leave him alone. Since that morning when he had seemed to be warning her to leave her job, he had appeared to avoid her.

She went slowly down the stairs to the lunchroom, now almost deserted. Hugo Blake stood by the door, evidently he had been waiting for her to come down.

"Get a late."

She nodded. "I had some extra work to do."

Oh, Well, I have some extra work for you too." He smiled down at her, his round face friendly, his sharp little eyes beaming at her from behind the thick-lensed glasses.

Nancy managed to smile back. "That's good. When?"

"Tonight. Will you be home?"

She nodded.

"Good. I'll telephone you. I want to talk to you tonight—I have something very important for you to do." He smiled once more and left her, going on up the stairs.

She went on into the lunchroom and ordered a glass of milk, too exhausted with work and anxiety to think of food. She sat in the almost empty room sipping the milk slowly, trying to make some order out of the chaos of her thoughts.

Hugo Blake had something important for her to do. That might mean she could learn something important, something she could take to John Bristow as evidence. That was the thing she must do, no matter who it involved. With that accomplished perhaps she could leave here, find a job in some new place. Not that it mattered very much to her what happened now.

She went on back to the office wearily. At the door Tom Cantwell passed her, going in the direction of the machine shops. He barely nodded to her, his lean face looked angry, almost pale. She wondered if by any chance he could have learned what she planned to do. Well, that didn't matter now either.

It was a minute past 1 when she entered the big office already busy and noisy. The clatter of typewriters and rattle of papers seemed to slacken for a moment as she stepped in the door, was was conscious of Madge Fletcher stopping what she was doing to look very slowly and deliberately at her up at the clock, and back at her again.

Not a word was said, but several other pairs of eyes followed those of the head stenographer.

Her cheeks burning, Nancy sat down at her desk.

"Another set of reports, Miss Ellis. Hurry them, please—Mr. Grimshaw wants them as soon as possible."

Nancy nodded. "Again fingers flew against time. Not as rapidly now, however. The morning's activity had drained her of strength."

"You're finally finished?" Take them to Mr. Grimshaw."

If she hadn't been late with the reports, Nancy thought a little resentfully, she wouldn't have been asked to deliver them to the office manager.

She opened the door of the inner office and walked in. Mr. Grimshaw still sat at his desk, but now he had buried his face in his arms.

She wondered what she ought to do. If he were asleep, he might resent being waked just to be told that the reports were finished. Or, if there was really an unusual hour for the work, he might not like it if he weren't waked.

"Mr. Grimshaw..."

There was no response to her timid voice. She laid the pile of reports in the wire basket, hesitated a moment and then tried again, louder.

"Mr. Grimshaw..."

Then she screamed. On Grimshaw's head was a dark red stain.

All Have Contributed

But Some Indian Princes And Chiefs Are Not Wealthy

The London Evening News says: Not all the Chiefs of States in India are wealthy, nor even all the Maharajahs; yet by this time I think every prince and princeling, great or small, has contributed in some form to the Victory's War Purpose Fund.

I hear of a gift from the Chief of a Western India state who is known to be very far from rich. He has sent 1800 rupees; he suggests that the Rs 100 will buy a rifle, complete with bayonet, and that Rs 80 will pay for 1,000 rounds of ammunition.

He gave the rifle and bayonet, his subjects the ammunition.

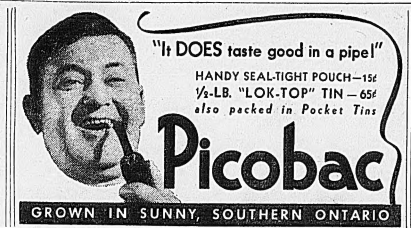

It is a contrast to the gift of the Nizam of Hyderabad and his subjects, which now amounts to £290,000 for the R.A.F.

Taking No Chances

The hooter had sounded for dinner. The foreman noticed how quickly one of the men, a notoriously lazy fellow, put down his pick.

"I believe," he said sarcastically, "that if the hooter sounded when you had your pick in the air you would leave it there."

"If it got as near to the time as that," replied the man, "I wouldn't trouble to lift it up."

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

CORRECT POISED MANNERS
BEST ROAD TO POPULARITY

Know Right Thing in Public

They belong to the nicest crowd in town—you can see from their poised, gracious manners.

Instead of plunging down the aisle with the girl following him, he courteously asks where she'd like to sit, then states her preference to the usher. And of course he'll ask the seats, while her beau follows her. On leaving the theatre, too, she'll go first up the aisle.

To know such little points, to date and party without nervous moments of doubt and hesitation—what a lot it means to your poise and popularity. But easy to check up on etiquette.

The next time a man takes you out, remember he's your host. Stopping at a restaurant, let him choose the table with the aid of the head waiter. And of course he'll ask what you'd like to have and give your order to the waiter.

If your beau takes you motoring, up to you to suggest going in when you arrive home. For, again, your beau as host wouldn't seem to wish to get rid of his guest.

Know the charming manners that make you a welcome member of any circle. Our 32-page booklet tells the correct thing for parties, dates, the movies, games; when visiting, entertaining, motoring. Gives etiquette of introduction, invitations, telephoning.

MAGAZINE REPRODUCES FAMOUS ANIMAL PICTURES

An announcement of unusual interest appears in the current issue of the Family Herald and Weekly Star. This magazine has secured the rights to reproduce, in full color, the now famous series of Dairy Cattle Pictures painted by Ross Butler, well-known Agricultural artist. Of special interest to dairy men, breeders, junior farmers, teachers, etc., the series consists of eight paintings portraying the ideal cow and bull (approved by the breeders' associations) in the Holstein, Ayrshire, Jersey and Guernsey breeds. The pictures are 14" X 11" in size and are offered readers in sets of eight, postage paid, at a nominal cost within reach of all.

In making these pictures available to readers, the Family Herald and Weekly Star once more identifies itself with progressive farming. A leader in all matters pertaining to farming for over seventy years, the Family Herald and Weekly Star has always disseminated many times more farming information . . . saved and made for its readers many more dollars . . . than any other magazine.

The timely offer of Ross Butler's Dairy Cattle Pictures will be welcomed by all who are interested in fine cattle and will be hailed as another milestone in the long list of services rendered to Herald readers.

POLISH SOLDIERS TRAIN IN SCOTLAND

Training side by side with the British troops in Scotland, soldiers of Poland live and work for the day of their country's liberation. The press photograph above shows Polish troops in Bren Gun carriers at a march—past.

The Whole Family must Budget to Buy WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES!

Yes! EVERY CANADIAN FAMILY Must Pledge and Sacrifice...

"THIS TIME we are ALL in the front line."—H.M. THE KING.

For Each $4.00
You Get Back $5.00

$ 5.00 for $ 4.00 $10.00 for $ 8.00

$100.00 for $80.00

War Savings Certificates are a direct obligation of the Dominion of Canada, redeemable in 7½ years. At the end of that time your investment will have increased twenty-five per cent., which represents interest at 2½% compounded half yearly.

They may be redeemed at option of registered owner, after six months from date of issue, at an established scale of values.

The following table represents an average basis of saving. These figures are only illustrative, as the amount of saving which is possible will vary according to each individual's family and other economic circumstances.

Earnings Per Week	Savings Per Week	Maturity Values of Annual Purchases
Up to $20	25¢ to $1.00	$ 15 to $ 65
$20 to $30	$1.25 to $2.00	$ 80 to $120
$30 to $40	$2.25 to $3.50	$145 to $225
Over $40	$3.75 to $9.25	$245 to $600

FALL IN! The line is forming. Close the ranks. Answer His Majesty's call. Every man, woman and child in Canada has a duty to perform. Some will fight. You, too, have a job to do. It may demand sacrifice. You are called on to help furnish the munitions needed to win the war . . . guns and tanks for the army . . . planes for the air force . . . ships for the navy and merchant marine. Guns and tanks and planes and ships cost money. You are not asked to give—you are only asked to LEND your money. This is something you can do . . . something you must do.

There is only one place to get the money Canada needs to win this war—from the people of Canada. A large part will come from business firms and people with large incomes. They will pay high taxes and buy heavily of War Loan Bonds. But more money is needed . . . a great deal more. $10,000,000 a month is expected from men, women and children who invest in War Savings Certificates.

Work hard. Earn more. Save all you can and lend your savings to Canada. BUY WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES. Budget to buy them regularly. Buy them every week . . . every month . . . as long as the war lasts. You will be forming a good habit . . . the saving habit . . . a habit that will benefit you when victory is won. You will be doing a real job in helping to win the war.
